Interests
Your Interests describe what you enjoy. Think carefully about your results—what you scored high on, what you scored low on. Part of living a life of joy and purpose means always finding ways to satisfy your interests.

Your interests are what keep you motivated and energized. Understanding and following them will bring enjoyment and satisfaction to your life.

Social:
People with Social interests like being in roles where they can directly help people—teachers, pastors, and counselors, for example.

- You thrive in roles that directly help people.
- You like to promote people’s learning and personal development.
- You probably really enjoy communicating, counseling, teaching, advising, and being of service to people

Artistic
Those with Artistic interests really appreciate self-expression, certainly through fine arts but also drama, writing, music, and even culinary activities.

As someone with Artistic interests:

- You enjoy being creative and relish the opportunity to express yourself.
- You tend to appreciate the artistic side of things, like visual arts, writing, music, drama, dance, and other activities that involve forms, designs, and patterns.
- You probably thrive in work settings where you don’t have to follow a clear set of rules.

Enterprising
Those with Enterprising interests enjoy persuading people. They can do so in business-related tasks like sales and marketing, but also through law, politics, and public speaking.

As someone with Enterprising interests:

- You are a go-getter who enjoys persuading and leading people.
- You thrive in decision maker roles.
- You excel at starting up and carrying out new projects, especially business ventures.
- You’re action-oriented and like taking risks for profit.
Realistic
People with Realistic interests enjoy mechanical activities, athletics, working with their hands, being outdoors, and getting dirt under their fingernails.

- You are “realistic” and pragmatic in your outlook, but more importantly, you probably enjoy working with your hands, working outdoors, and working on mechanical activities.
- You thrive when dealing with tangible, real-world objects, and materials, like plants, wood, tools, and machinery.
- You may enjoy providing security services, operating equipment, and vehicles.

Investigative
People characterized by Investigative interests enjoy asking intellectual questions, investigating the answers to those questions, and maybe using the methods of science.

- You thrive when exploring ideas, asking intellectual questions, and seeking answers. You probably enjoy searching for the facts and figuring out problems mentally.
- You enjoy math, science, and research, and appreciate having independence in how you approach work.

Conventional
People with Conventional interests enjoy organizing things. They love detail-oriented tasks and get a kick out of things like filing systems and spreadsheets.

- You like to follow set procedures and routines.
- You’re probably detail oriented and enjoy working with data.
- You appreciate precise standards to guide you through your work.
- You thrive when there is a clear chain of command in the workplace.